

SPFMS Launches New Website to Strengthen Transparency and Service Delivery

The Strengthening Public Financial Management Program to Enable Service Delivery (SPFMS) has taken another step forward in digital transformation with the official launch of its newly designed website on 12 August 2025. The initiative is aimed at improving transparency, accessibility, and efficiency in the management of public finances, reflecting the government's commitment to strengthening accountability in service delivery.

The inauguration ceremony was held at the SPFMS Program Office in Ramna, Dhaka. Bilquis Jahan Rimi, Additional Secretary (Budget-1), Finance Division, and National Program Director of SPFMS, graced the event as the Chief Guest. She formally unveiled the website and toured its key sections, which feature updated resources, reform progress, training schedules, research publications, and interactive tools for users. While appreciating the progress made, Rimi emphasized that “the website should continue to evolve as a dynamic platform, ensuring that financial management information remains accessible to citizens and stakeholders alike.”

The revamped website is designed to serve as a central hub for information on public financial management reforms under SPFMS. It offers timely updates on project activities, training opportunities, policy guidelines, and reports. With user-friendly navigation and a responsive layout, the site ensures easier access for government officials, researchers, development partners, and the general public.

By integrating modern digital features, the website also supports the Finance Division's vision of building a transparent, accountable, and citizen-oriented financial management system. It is expected to act as a bridge between policymakers and the public, creating avenues for greater engagement, knowledge sharing, and monitoring of ongoing reforms.
